Chapter 1 by Brice Sweppenhiser

Justin Helmburg was almost everything a man would want. He was rich and was the CEO of a company named "Tragic Worlds". His company sold strange figurines that held swords and guns and went viral for both children and adults. He was a married man. His wife, Jane, being 34, and him being 43 years old. He had two boys that he desperately loved and would do anything in the world for them, their names being Josh and Brandon. He had hundreds of recalled figurines in his basement and attic. He lived in a regular two story home in San Francisco, Califoirnia. Usually his life would end in happily ever after. But there was a reason those figurines were recalled. Paper's said they were too loud or they were breaking to easily. Yes, these reason were true, but what lied inside them would haunt the entire Earth as we know it.

Destrium. Destrium was an element that could bring inanimate things to life. Someone in the head-quarters of "Tragic Worlds" in , had poured a bottle of Destrium inside the machinery that made the rubber body and guns and swords.

It was March 1st, 2043, Justin had heard strange noices in his attic and basement. He tried to ignore them, but they got to his head. He opened the attic and all of a sudden, little men start

Imagine what they could do in a day. Across the entire Earth. What were these "Tragic Worlds" figurines named? Justin named the most dangerous ones, "The Apocalypse Soldiers."

Justin found a hotel 20 miles away from San Francisco and decided to lay down and think. Think about what he left he behind and about "Who could've done this."
